

Elvis Espinoza

9/21/19

Why are women the suppressed ones?

Throughout the timeline of history politics and religion has interrupted women's lifestyle. Precisely the women in Iran, where women lack prosperity and only men and the privileged women get to have a future. Under the Qajar Dynasty (1789-1925) women were seen as a reproduction machine, house maintainer and nothing more, because in their religion (Islam) states women are the inferior race. Under the Pahlavi Dynasty (1925-79) women had the highest point of freedom, urbanization was occurring and women were able to work outside of their household. Not only work but women gained the ability to go to schools with the boys. Today Iran is ruled by the Islamic State where women are back to where they started, Qajar Dynasty, they are segregated and hardly have the ability to do anything without a husband, for instance in order for a woman to sit in the front of the bus their husband has to accompany their wife, if not then the woman must sit in the back. Women's rights in Iran filled with unfairness. Women should have rights just as man. It's not like they cannot receive equality, the Pahlavi Dynasty is evidence that women can receive freedom and justice even with religion implemented. Why should women have to intake punishment, where they're the ones that gave fruit to everyone? For they made us live an extra year, why should society in Iran or anywhere suppress women?